KFRI's game-changer virus can save teak plantations

Hyblaea puera Nucleopolyhedrosis Virus (HpNPV), identified and mass-developed by KFRI, offers eco-friendly alternative to chemical pesticides and prevents massive defoliation in teak trees

Mini Muringatheri
THRISSUR

A revolutionary technology developed by the Kerala Forest Research Institute (KFRI) can transform the way teak plantations are protected from their most notorious pest - the teak defoliator moth (Hyblaea puera). The institute has successfully identified, mass-produced, and patented a naturally occurring virus, Hyblaea puera Nucleopolyhedrosis Virus (HpNPV), which causes lethal infection in the pest larvae and prevents widespread defoliation of teak trees.

For decades, teak defoliator has wreaked havoc in plantations, stripping entire forests of their foliage up to six times a year, weakening trees, and causing significant loss in timber yield.

0"When the larvae attack, the tree spends its energy regenerating leaves instead of growing. It's a huge invisible loss," explains T.V. Sajeev, Principal Scientist at the KFRI.

Conventional control methods such as aerial spraying of chemical pesticides were tried – at Konni in Kerala and Barnavappara in Madhya Pradesh – inviting protests due to environmental concerns. The KFRI even presented a paper at the 1980 Forestry Conference at Dehradun titled 'The problem of teak defoliator: to spray or not to spray?'

Teak defoliator larva (Hyblaea puera) killed using HpNPV.
SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

Economic loss

KFRI's sustained research showed that the economic loss due to teak defoliators is staggering: an estimated 3 cubic metres of wood per hectare annually, translating to ₹562.5-crore loss in Kerala and ₹12,525 crore in India. The institute screened the pest's natural enemies and zeroed in on HpNPV, a virus that is entirely host-specific, targeting only the teak defoliator larvae, and thus completely safe for the forest ecosystem.

"The beauty of the virus is in how it works," said Dr. Sajeev. "It multiplies at least a trillion times inside a single larva. When the body breaks open, it releases huge quantities of inoculum. Even if the infection is sub-lethal, the virus stays in the insect, gets passed on to the next generation, and proves lethal then." With a clear understanding of the pest's life cycle, HpNPV can be applied during early-stage outbreaks to prevent larger infestations.

Field trials at Nilambur, seen as India's cradle of teak, were a success. The KFRI has already transferred the know-how for outbreak monitoring and virus application to the Forest department. "Now it's up to the department to formally adopt the technology," said Dr. Sajeev.

Export potential

What makes this innovation more significant is that many of the 64 countries now cultivating teak – from its native range of just four (India, Myanmar, Laos, Thailand) – have banned chemical pesticide use. This opens up a massive export potential for the eco-friendly HpNPV technology.

The KFRI will showcase the HpNPV solution at the Kerala State Council for Science, Technology and Environment (KSCSTE) R&D Summit 2025, to be held on August 7 in Thiruvananthapuram, positioning it as a scalable, sustainable model for forestry management across the globe.

Water wonderland project work to begin soon

The Hindu Bureau
ALAPPUZHA

Work on the 'Alappuzha- A Global Water Wonderland' project under the Swadesh Darshan 2.0 scheme is set to begin soon.

The project will be implemented at a cost of ₹93.17 crore, including ₹74.95 crore provided as a loan by the Union government. 'The State government has designated the Kerala Tourism Infrastructure Limited as the nodal agency for its implementation.

A preliminary meeting ahead of the project launch was held recently. District Collector Alex Varghese, MLAs P.P. Chitharanjan and H. Salam and others attended the meeting.

Transformation

The project includes transforming the Alappuzha beach, canals and backwaters into an "iconic global tourist destination." The beachfront development, which envisions an ecologically sensitive upgrade of the area, includes setting up promenade walkways, parking lots, seating spaces, lighting, landscaping, spaces for conducting events, an Indian Coast Guard station, outdoor sports courts, and waste management, among other amenities.

The canal-side transformation aims to restore and revitalise the historic canals of Alappuzha town, "reintroducing them as thriving public spaces while respecting their ecological and cultural significance". Planned works include walkways, seating, lighting, plazas, boat docks, cafes and boat jetty development.

An international cruise terminal with parking, marina, experience centre, information kiosks, water adventure zone, restaurant, and toilets will come up at Punnamada Finishing Point.

Mr. Varghese said that steps would be taken to obtain all necessary approvals from various departments at the earliest. The aim is to complete the project by February 2026, he added.
